

Fiduciary Access to Digital Assets and Accounts

Privacy Law Blog on October 2, 2014

Traditionally, a person's most valuable assets to be distributed upon death consisted of tangible items such as real property, cash, jewelry and personal effects of sentimental value like photographs and letters. However, the advent of the digital age has brought a shift from file cabinets, mailmen and photo albums to cloud storage, e-mail accounts and... Continue Reading

Related Professionals

- Carly Ziegler
Associate