

Why Legal Chiefs Need to Start Developing ChatGPT Compliance Programs

Law.com on April 21, 2023

ChatGPT technology is on a course to shake up the legal industry. But with all the opportunities that generative AI brings comes a lot of risk. In the latest episode of the Legal Speak podcast, legal technology reporter Cassandre Coyer speaks to Ryan Blaney, head of the global privacy and cybersecurity group at Proskauer Rose, about the potential privacy concerns associated with ChatGPT.

Ryan shares how the technology fits into the current privacy law and regulatory landscapes, and provides insight for in-house legal and privacy counsel, advising the need for legal chiefs to start developing compliance programs around ChatGPT, particularly those in regulated spaces such as healthcare or financial services.
