Hannah Silverman is an associate in the Litigation Department and a member of the Trial Strategies and White Collar Defense & Investigations Groups. Hannah's practice focuses on complex civil and commercial disputes in both federal and state courts, with an emphasis on antitrust and product liability actions. Most recently, Hannah was part of the team that secured a landmark victory for Sanderson Farms following one of the largest-ever agriculture industry antitrust trials. The trial team won a complete defense verdict, defeating damages claims of $7 billion.

Hannah earned her Juris Doctor, cum laude, from Fordham University School of Law. During law school, Hannah served as an articles and notes editor of the Fordham Law Review and as an associate editor of the Dispute Resolution Society. She also served as a legal writing advisor to first-year students. She is the author of "The Role of 'Coordinating Discovery Attorneys' in Multidefendant Federal Criminal Cases," 88 Fordham L. Rev. 1173 (2019), which received the Mary Daly Graduation Prize in Legal Ethics.
